Please join us for a panel discussion about the engagement between religious actors in Latin American democracies and contentious issues of environmental justice, the exploitation of natural resources, and gender and sexuality-based rights.

PANELISTS
Paul Freston, Wilfrid Laurier University
Guillermo Kerber, World Council of Churches
Mario Pecheny, University of Buenos Aires

MODERATORS
Evan Berry, American University
Macarena Sáez, American University

The event will be in English, with a reception to follow.

The Center for Latin American and Latino Studies’ two-year project on Religion and Democracy in Latin America is generously funded by the Henry R. Luce Initiative on Religion and International Affairs.

For more information please contact Dennis Stinchcomb at denniss@american.edu or (202) 885-6710.