

MIDDLE EAST STUDIES

Religious Freedom in Islamic International Law

Professor Kristine Kalanges

Department of Justice, Law, & Society

In the latter part of the 20th century, Islamists sought to institutionalize their religious authority and political power in state constitutions and to develop Islamic alternatives to Western international law. The resulting agreements have raised pressing questions about the compatibility of Islam and human rights, the status of non-Muslims and religious freedom in Islamic declarations, and other political considerations.

The logo for Middle East Studies at American University, featuring the letters 'MES' stacked above '@' stacked above 'AU' in white on a blue background.

www.american.edu/mes

Wednesday, October 27th

12:45 to 2 PM

Graduate Research Center, Room B60, Bender Library

For more info: Professors Diane Singerman (dsinger@american.edu), Kristin Diwan (diwan@american.edu), or Mustafa Aksakal (aksakal@american.edu)