

Gail Bingham

Gail Bingham is President Emeritus of RESOLVE. Gail currently serves as the chair for the Missouri River Recovery Implementation Committee and convener of the Lead Service Line Replacement Collaborative. She has mediated environmental, public health and other policy issues since the late 1970s and is the 2006 winner of the Mary Parker Follett Award of the Association for Conflict Resolution. Gail is the author of numerous publications including “When the Sparks Fly: Building Consensus When the Science is Contested” and Resolving Environmental Disputes: A Decade of Experience. She is a founding member of the Center on Environmental Policy’s advisory board at American University and serves on the advisory board of the Haub School of Natural Resources at the University of Wyoming. Gail studied anthropology at Stanford University and received a BS in environmental planning from Western Washington University.