

a look inside.... Seniors Learn Their Final Lessons

First Year Issue Group Projects

pages 2,5&6

Leslie Kodet

Publications Coordinator

After a year and a half apart, the Class of 2011 reunited for its final semester together. Beginning with a retreat in January and culminating with a certificate ceremony in April, these seniors have come together to reconnect, and welcome two early graduates from the Class of 2012.

The class decided to study the Justices on the Supreme Court as leaders. Each student presented a justice as a case study of leadership on the Supreme Court.

Through the presentation and discussion, the class learned how the leadership on the high court could be translated to leadership skills rel-

Leadership Turns 20!

Peter Goelz

Staff Writer

travels disallowed his pres-The academic year of 2010-program came to celebrate. Liza 2011 marks a special moment Romanow, a first year in the in the Leadership Program's Program. "I can't tell you how life: We've turned 20! To cel-many interesting people I have ebrate, the Program hosted a talked to tonight."

reception at Chef Geoff's for To kick off the programmed students, alumni and patrons. portion of the event, Margaret The celebration offered those Marr, the Program's current diin attendance the chance to rector, offered welcoming renetwork and learn about the marks and introduced the As-Program's roots while also sociate Dean of the School of providing them with a vari-Public Affairs, Margaret Weekes ety appetizers, desserts, and who congratulated the Program libations. As the hall began to on a fantastic twenty years.

fill, Student Director Amanda Following Dean Weekes' brief Merkwae noted, "We have remarks, the many guests were been looking forward to host- shown a recorded address from Neil Kerwin, the former Dean continued on page 10 ing this for a while now."

Andy MacCracken writes a letter to the troops evant to daily life.

importance of pragmatic versus done. Scalia's use of humor principled modes of operation, allows him to be approachpolitical skills, dissents, and di- able and conversational versity as useful leadership traits. when his dissents are so Tracy Empson, for example, alienating. The students while presenting on Justice Sca- gleaned from Scalia that lia, explained how humor is used humor, when used approas a tool to counter his scathing priately, can put an audidissents.

Many of Leadership's former directors as well as alumni and members of the present day ence at the event himself, discussed the Leadership Program's positive influence on the University. Having helped create the program himself, he addressed how the Program was established to further the development of students and their leadership abilities.

He also noted the Program's many profound transformations and reiterated his hope that the Program carries on to far surpass his wildest expectations by continuing to Students discussed the work would be able to get ence at eas and make a le-

the workplace, not much

Without friendships in continued on page 8 of the School of Public Affairs and current President of American University.

Kerwin, regretful that his

2 | leadershipvisions

Health, Food and Nutrition

Philip Scrange Staff Writer

The Health, Food, and Nutrition issue group partnered with Life Pieces to Masterpieces, an aftercare program in Anacostia for at-risk African American males. The group found evidence that there is a scarcity of grocery stores offering nutritious food in Wards 7 and 8. The group hoped that increasing consumer awareness could alter food choices.

The group held five classes on Tuesdays with 7 to 10-year-old boys. The classes focused on vegetables, fruits, grains, and dairy. On the fourth week, a group of AU Wrestlers went with the group to talk about the value of milk to building strong muscles.

boys to draw healthy food. The boys came success. up with pizza and fast food. As the fifth week wrapped up, the group asked the boys to draw a picture again. This time a couple drew oranges and others apples. By this metric, the In the first class, the group asked the Health, Food, and Nutrition interest group considered their project a

Poverty

Emily Yu Staff Writer

The Poverty Issue Group conducted its fiveweek workshop program targeting depression in impoverished youth at the Hopkins Branch of the Boys and Girls Club of Greater Washington. They had the pleasure of working with a group of about 15 to 20 amazing young people ranging from the ages of 4 to 11 years old.

Over the course of six visits the group taught lessons in health and nutrition, conflict management, stress and anxiety relief, and goal setting. They incorporated hands-on and interactive activities that included making ants on a log, creating skits, painting outside, journal writing, drawing self portraits, and relay races.

members questioned whether the activities would be enjoyable and engaging for the children or contribute to them learning the intended lessons. But as the group members developed close friendships with many of the children, it was clear that every one had fun

At the beginning of the program, the group spending time doing the activities together. The group's project was a success because during the time they spent with the children, everyone got to forget for a little while their trials or worries and just enjoy each others' company.

SPA leadershipvisions 3

Sophomores Wrap-Up Their Projects

Danielle Pullan

Guest Writer

With the end of the vear comes the conclusion of the sophomore class' social action projects, many of which saw great success. These projects all address a social issue that the individual students identified as a problem in society. Sophomores began the process immediately after returning from their retreat in September, working on a policy memo, project proposal, and grant application during the first half of the year. The students implemented their then projects proposed over the course of the past semester.

Iosé Morales directed a play about adolescents living in a post-9/11 world dealing with Islamophobia, an issue important to Morales. He discovered "Hearts and Minds" by Lugman Ali and received the author's permission to pre-States. Morales teamed up with the on-campus theatre group AU Players, and the cast put on three performances, all of which were extremely wellreceived. When asked what he learned from this experience, Morales answered. "Don't doubt the power of your idea, because it can turn into something huge."

Sarah wanted to address the issue of and was willing to sponsor reproductive rights in third the trip with her, but she world countries, specifically has recently succeeded in Guatemala. In order to effectively disseminate information project was challenging, but and supplies to women in this I learned a lot," Robinson area of the world, Robinson says. designed an Alternative Break trip that she hopes will be accepted for the summer of 2012. food insecurity and how to This entailed planning several eat locally and sustainably. pre-departure lessons on the To do this, she partnered educational aspects of the trip, researching the specific location, and once approved, Robinson herself will be in charge to educate students. Chef of leading the trip.

A challenge that she cooking mier the show in the United faced was finding a partner showing students how they

Players in "Hearts and Minds"

Sophomores Tom Schad, Kathryn Braisted, and Katie Hanson

Robinson who was fluent in Spanish finding such a person. "This > Katie Hanson values educating people on with Bon Appétit, the food service company on campus, to put on several events Mary Soto put on multiple demonstrations, can cook healthy, sustainable dishes and providing them with recipes. For the most recent event. Soto only used foods she found at the on-campus farmer's market and put on the demonstration right next to the farmers' tents.

> Hanson also worked with Bon Appétit on their Low Carbon Day event, showing students how they can still eat good food and reduce their environmental impacts. Hanson now prides herself on being something of a "Bon Appétit ambassador."

In a similar vein, Hannah Murphy wanted to address an issue that was near and dear to her because she grew up near the heart of it - farm workers rights in Amocoli, Florida. Murphy saw the conditions that these migrant harvesters were subjected to - poorly-made, temporary housing, incredibly low wages, and no stable home, as they had to travel from southern Florida up the east coast with the harvest seasons.

Murphy researched the issue while she was home over winter break and put together a presentation that she is using to spread the news of the farm workers' situation. She has presented it to oncampus groups such as Ecosense and hopes to bring it to a greater audience.

> is particularly It

continued on page 7

4 | leadershipvisions

Visions of Cherry Blossoms

Holly Hagerty Staff Writer

day, March 31, Leadership stu- more little-known features and dents came together for a combi- how they related to "the times nation tour of the Cherry Blossom and actions of Roosevelt." festival and history of the memorials surrounding the National Mall. explained how the recurring event allows student to enjoy the in the memorial represented festival scenery while simultane- the capacity and the potential of ously gaining insight into the lead-Roosevelt's leadership to enact ership lessons offered by figures change in the lives of citizens, like Franklin Delano Roosevelt starting out calm and growing and Thomas Jefferson, whose me- in strength as the group made its morials were included in the tour. way through the rooms.

Leaders from all grades traveled together to the Mall, demonstrate that Roosevelt was where they were joined by Na- never represented, in life or in tional Park service tour guide and his memorial, as having a wheel-AU graduate student Tim Moore. chair, which in recent years has Moore, who is also a friend of for- angered disability awareness mer student director Stephen Lau- groups and individuals who see done, introduced the Leadership the former president as an inspistudents to the history of the Dis- ration for disabled individuals. trict's cherry blossom obsession, which can be traced back more guide talk about the 'controthan a century to the years of the versy' surrounding the issue of Taft presidency.

ning hours was an added bonus, have to think of how my actions giving students the opportunity to will affect others," says Cristina enjoy the cherry blossoms without Kladis, freshman in the prothe crowds of tourists that usually gram. flock to the festival during the day.

catered by Angelico's Pizzeria, helped him to "see the memorial students continued to the FDR in a whole new light." Classmate memorial, which is divided into Katherine Maddente four rooms representing the four terms of Roosevelt's presidency. Leading students through these On the evening of Thurs- rooms, Moore discussed their

For example, Moore This annual Leadership theme of water and fountains

Moore made a point to

"Listening to our tour presenting Roosevelt in a wheel-Touring during the eve- chair reminded me that I always

Josh Halpren, a pro-After enjoying dinner gram first year, says Moore would agree, "I definitely learned a lot about the memorial... I don't the tour, students could catch think I ever would've known the glimpses of the new Martin historical significance of all the Luther King, Jr. memorial bedifferent features if we didn't go ing constructed on the National on that tour."

FDR memorial, senior Stephen between the Roosevelt and Jef-Laudone led the Leadership students on to the Jefferson memo- Basin. Cornell described it as a rial. Laudone, a veritable "History Wonk" when it comes to D.C. oring leaders, trivia, pointed out interesting both the man and his work." facts and architectural features of the memorial.

For instance, the Washington Monument is shifted over second semester. so there's a clear view between the White House and the Jeffer- tor of the program, described son memorial, and on the walls the tour as a way of coming "full are four excerpts from Jefferson's circle" with the beginning of the work that highlight his main year, commenting on its simiideas.

took away from the monument of the Class of 2014 were just tour, freshman Jean Cornell beginning to get to know one identifies "the difference between another. how leaders are honored today compared to in the past. Jefferson's memorial idealized him, making him somewhat of a god in a temple; FDR's memorial, on the other hand, honored his work and focused on the people he served."

After the conclusion of Mall. The memorial, to be com-Moving on from the pleted in August 2011, is located ferson memorials on the Tidal "mix" of the two forms of hon-"highlighting

The tour is a great way for students to come back together close to the end of a busy

Margaret Marr, direclarity to first semester events in When asked what she Dupont Circle, when members

SPA leadershipvisions D

Environmental Sustainability

John Caddock Staff Writer

The 2010-2011 Environmental Sustainability Issue Group immediately became interested in the issues related to the Chesapeake Bay and the surrounding watershed area. This concern was funneled into the creation of the Chesapeake Bay Student Alliance, a network of college students who use both a hands on and educational approach to engage their fellow students and community members to help combat the many threats to the Chesapeake Bay.

Through the combined effort of members John Caddock, Joe Wisniewski, Marissa Kibler, Michael Penek, Evan Brown, Julia Kinsey, Catalina Lilo, and teaching assistant Stephen Bronskill, the group took many important steps in cleaning up the Bay and educating a new generation about the importance of protecting our nation's waters.

The Chesapeake Bay Student Alliance found a tremendous amount of success reaching out to both members of our local community and the AU student body through a dual campaign consisting of hands on park clean ups and an ambitious awareness campaign. The issue group recruited eighty-five unique volunteers over five events that did everything from plant trees to remove a shopping cart from a river. The group plans to build off of this year's success and combine its efforts with Eco-Sense in the future!

Gender and Sexuality

Jean Cornell Staff Writer

The Gender and Sexuality Issue Group created and implemented not one but two social action projects this semester. Each focused on reducing bullying of and providing successful role models for the lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) youth community in the DC metro area.

The first project took place at Woodrow Wilson High School temporarily located at the University of the District of Columbia. Group members spent three weeks going into social studies classes and teaching a class lesson about issues facing the LGBT community. The lessons stressed tolerance and the impact of bullying.

The second project was a day spent with the Rainbow Youth Alliance (RYA), a LGBT youth group, in Rockville, Maryland. Members of the issue group talked with high school students about college, ate lunch, and channeled their energy into painting.

Group members Zachary Baldwin, Zachary Cady, Jean Cornell, Joshua Halpren, Cristina Kladis, Danielle Nispel, Malea Otranto, and TA Danna Hailfinger learned about catering to the needs of the constituency and developing a curriculum throughout the process. They are proud of the work they have done to help combat bullying and increase support for the LGBT youth community in Washington, DC.

6 | leadershipvisions

Education

Dan Raymer

Staff Writer

Tackling the immense problem of dropping out of school, The Education issue group created a mentorship program at the Boys and Girls Club, Hopkins Branch. Located in the southeast of Washington D.C., the center serves some of the most underprivileged children in the region. Through the development of a fun and innovative program, the group was able to help stimulate the children to stay in school.

The project ran from mid-March through the end of April. Every Monday and Friday groups of three to four students implemented the project with the middle school students. From computer games that taught career planning to a Pictionary game that focused on goal setting, the education group used creative outlets to accomplish their project's goals.

To conclude the project, 15 students traveled to American University to see college first hand. They enjoyed a tour of campus, a peek into dorm life, and a great dinner in TDR. Through the program, the students who participated gained new insight into the benefits of staying in school and learned about where their education could take them. It was truly a remarkable experience.

Civil Rights and Diversity

Tyler Sadonis

Staff Writer

Members of the Civil Rights and Diversity issue group crafted a project around their concern for the youth of Washington DC. Recognizing the power of spoken word poetry, group members Allie Cannington, Ki'tay Davidson, Rachel Dockery, Sarah Durgin, Peter Goelz, Liza Romanow, and Tyler Sadonis created a poetry program to help Washington DC high school students improve their reading and writing skills and give students a means to express their emotions.

The group's program, "Poetry Beats Silence," worked with students at four locations: Washington Metropolitan High School, Mamie D. Lee School, Ballou High School, and the Sasha Bruce House. The group members From the left: Liza Romanow, Allie Cannington, Sarah Durgin, created curriculums that exposed students to such poets as Shel Silverstein, Tupac, and Andrea Gibson. Each student was given their own composition notebook for them of the Poetry Beats Silence program.

raised during group discussions. Working with the students to encourage them through their struggles proved a valuable lesson for the issue group. The Civil Rights and to record their thoughts and poetry throughout the course| Diversity group has come out of this experience feeling inspired by the enthusiasm of students in the program and very apprecia-Members of the Civil Rights and Diversity issue tive for the power of poetry. The issue group members would like group were touched by the sensitive issues that students to give special thanks to their wonderful TA Cristina Khan.

Ki'tay Davidson, Peter Goelz, and Tyler Sadonis Missing from photo: Rachel Dockery

4.26.2011

SPA |leadershipvisions

A Message from the Student Director

Amanda Merkwae Student Director

After one action-packed year, I could not be more thankful for the tremendous individuals responsible for making the program run smoothly on a weekly basis. This year's Steering Committee managed to put on some phenomenal events, match sophomores with incredible professional mentors, produce some fabulous publications, forge excellent ties with Program alumni, raise funds to finance the Program's activities, and foster fantastic buddy restudents and upperclassmen.

In the classroom, we added a few new members to the Leadership family this year. Patricia Bory, former Director of the Bay Area AmeriCorps program, joined to co-teach the sophomore class, and Jackie Norris, former Chief of Staff to First Lady Michelle Obama, took over the junior internship class.

Thanks to the hardworking sophomore and senior TAs, the first-year issue groups and second year students were able to create incredible social action projects. Leadership students alone managed to snag seven Eagle Endowment Grants to finance their projects-way to go! And of course, the Program would cease to function without the dedication and work of Professor Marr.

At the Program's 20th Anniversary celebration back in March, it was fascinating to lationships between first-year hear from alumni and former Directors about SPA Leadership's activities over the years.

What started in 1990 as a small group that learned about leadership through speakers and events, thanks to then Dean of SPA Neil Kerwin, blossomed into a comprehensive academic program helping to prepare talented leaders at AU for lifelong public service.

The SPA Leadership's twenty years worth of alumni have generously donated time and money to the leadership development of current students and have played an instrumental role in preserving the oral history of the Program.

Leadership formal went off without a hitch this April—we gave thanks to the TAs and Steering Committee members and wished the new ones great luck in the coming year. The senior class was given a warm send-off and congratclear from Robert Helbig's of advisors that includes Dacated to engaging American diplomacy effort." and European conservative ceeded in acquiring a board their efforts.

ulations through humorous toasts delivered over dinner. The four senior toastmasters sure have excellent comedic timing! Overall the event allowed students from all four years of the Program reconnect and reminisce about past Leadership successes.

Even though the seniors will be heading off to impressive careers and graduate schools across the country, they will never forget the meaningful relationships formed throughout their time in the Leadership Program.

I wish my friend Mitchell Duncombe the best of luck as he takes over for me as Student Director for 2011-2012. We had an impressive year, but as Leadership history seems to indicate, the quality of projects, events, and caliber of students will just keep on getting better and better!

Sophomores continued from page 3

Pullan's group posing on the last event with seniors from the Armed Forces Retirement Home. For her project, see the Dec. 2010 newsletter project that students' back- vid A. Keene, chairman of the grounds really shaped the American Conservative Union types of projects they were and president of the National interested in. Helbig, who Rifle association, and former hails from Erfurt, Germany, Congressman Jim Kolbe. Acspent his year forming the cording to YTCA's launch press Young Transatlantic Con- release, the organization seeks servative Alliance, a non- to "advance the transatlantic profit organization dedi- relationship" through a "public

The entire sophomore youth in a dialogue about class put many hours of hard their common beliefs. In work into their projects, and addition to formally found- now they are able to look back ing a non-profit and launch- on the impact that they had ing a website, Helbig suc- and reap the rewards of all of gitimate point.

3^{SPA} |leadershipvisions

Seniors continued from page 1

they gathered to make peanut butter and jely sandwhiches to distribute to the homeless in various areas of the city and write letters to the troops.

Completing their final good deed together was refreshing and felt like a closing a chapter in the seniors' lives. "After our original plans were thrown arwy from the flooding, it looked, for a moment, that we wouldn't have a senior service project. However, after having learned the importance of following through, we made a new plan for a week later, and accomplished that goal," refelcted Amanda Merkwae.

Being the end of a four-year (or in some cases three-year) journey together, the seniors have spent plenty of reflecting on their time in the Program, what they've gotten from it, and how the Program has helped them grow as people and as leaders.

"I firmly believe that I would not be graduating with such a passion for social justice and the drive to create positive change in our world without my participation in Leadership," explained Kathryn Baxter, reflecting on how the Program has most affected her.

Many students recognized how the Program teaches emphasizing "strengths, and [recognizing] weaknesses, we have the power to capitalize off our qualities to aid others," in the words of Scarlet Doyle.

Other students have emphasized the opportunities the Program presents. Emily Beyer described the As a final service project together, Easter weekend | Program as "what you make it. You'll form bonds with the people in your grade, those above and below you, as well as with the director. But what you end up getting out of it, including those relationships, will be entirely of your own doing."

> Kristen Cleveland explains the Program the best, saying, "I absolutely cannot stress how important the people in this Program have been to me. They are my family away from home, and I would do anything for the friends I have made through Leadership. It is a difficult program, but the people make it entirely worth every minute."

Meg Miraglia writes letters to the troops

Michael Monrroy, Amanda Merkwae, and Nick Armstrong make sandwiches to give to the homeless

Future Plans for the Graduating Seniors

3 will join Teach For America 2 will work for lobbying firms 3 are pursuing the fine arts 3 will continue at AU to earn their Masters 8 are considering law school 2 will join research and advocacy institutes 1 will join a gubernatorial campaign 1 intends to be a Naval Officer

SPA

4.26.2011 SPALeaders Play Dress Up: Formal 2011 Megan Huber

Megan Huber

Guest Writer

On Friday, April Committee throughout the 15th the members of the past year.

SPA Leadership Program gathered clusion of spring term.

sure to see so many leadand the rest of the Steering year."

The event represented at Maggiano's a "passing of the torch," accord-Little Italy restaurant in ing to Event Coordinator Tom-Friendship Heights to hon- my Hunt, "The program is now or the seniors and celebrate in the hands of a new batch of the year. The Leadership leadership students." Hunt is Formal, a yearly event, is referring to the introduction of the opportunity for Leader- the 2011 Steering Committee ship students to gather and and the new group of 6 TAs for celebrate the year that was the incoming freshman class. before everyone goes their "They have a great year ahead "It is always a plea- off," commented Hunt.

ers in one room," remarked mittee, comprised of Seniors professor Marr as she wel- Andy MacCracken, Stephen prepare to graduate from the comed everybody to the Ladone, Emily Beyer, and Meg event. Once everyone had Miraglia, had the responsibilsocialized, ventured to the ity of toasting, or in many cases the meal began with brus- members of the Program by chetta, ravioli fritte, and sal- thanking them for their conad. Professor Marr kicked tributions over the past four off the evening's ceremony years. "Our goal was to make it by welcoming the SPALe- funny for everyone," reflected aders and acknowledging Senior Andy MacCracken, "I the hard work of Student think everybody, especially the Director Amanda Merkwae seniors, really enjoyed it this ration for the hard work and

Amanda Merkwae, Stephen Bronskill, Katie Hanson, Hannah Murphy, and Tommy Hunt

The Toast Masters people that will be graduating separate ways after the con- of them. There will be a lot of used a sarcastic, tongue-in- from the program this spring. hard work but it will surely pay cheek humor to reflect upon "We have a lot to live up to," their classmates' embarrass- remarked freshmen and in-The Senior Toast Com- ing moments, personal nu- coming Events Coordinator ances, and hard work as they Liza Romanow.

university.

standing evening with a sense of admi- Alumni Coordinator David dedication of the wonderful

Mitchell Duncombe, the incoming Student Director

The toasts gave the for the 2011-2012 school year, seniors a chance to recollect has even more to live up to as bar, and found their seats, roasting, the outgoing senior great memories with each pointed out by Professor Marr other throughout their years following the Senior Toasts. in the program and recognize "[Outgoing Student Director] each other for all of their out- Amanda Merkwae has worked accomplishments. tirelessly behind the scenes this Even Leadership's underclass-year to make the SPA Leadmen walked away from the ership Program what it is."

continued on page 10

Andy MacCracken toasts the seniors at formal

Meg Miraglia and Emily Beyer enjoy formal

10^{SPA} leadershipvisions

4.26.2011

Leadership Formal continued from page 9

Silberman "Amanda has done a stupendous job leading the steering committee and has contributed so much time and effort to the Leadership Program this year." The program will undoubtedly miss its fearless leader, but has a lot to look forward to in new Student Director Duncombe.

The rest of the dinner, which included a delicious spread of parmesan chicken, fettuccini alfredo, lasagna, and pork with mashed potatoes, students spent time enjoying each other's company, reflecting on their own experiences over the past year.

"It was a great way to end the year," commented Senior Kristen Cleveland, "I'm going to miss all of these people next year. The SPA Leadership program has remarked, been like a family to me."

Students ended the evening with dancing and picture taking. Friends and Leadership formal!" classmates alike rushed to and had a great time singing to Katy Perry or dancing to the "Cha-Cha Slide".

The whole room flashed with cameras as everyone took pictures to document the fantastic evening.

remarked, "I loved posing flection for all in attendance. looked so great and getting all dressed up was so much fun. I can't wait until next year's

"I was really proud the dance floor after dinner of the hard work everybody put in to make this night possible," said Events Coordinator Tommy Hunt, "It's always amazing to see all of your hard work pay off in such a successful way."

Freshman Rachel Koretsky night full of laughter and re-with all of my friends! We all The event left everyone looking forward to the coming year and the experiences that we will have to reflect on at the next Formal.

> "I am so incredibly proud of each and every one of you," concluded Professor Marr at the dinner, "Thank you for making this year such a success. You have made the SPA Leadership program a better place to live and learn Overall, it was a great together, now go do the same to the world."

Andy MacCracken, Kristen Cleveland, Jenny Leland, Leslie Kodet, Kathryn Baxter, and Graham Vyse reunite Education Issue Group 2011

Leadership Turns 20! continued from 1

make a difference in the lives | tor (2001-2007) now works | to me was just to be able to see of those who embrace it.

The gathering of celebration-goers was also given the opportunity to hear brief addresses from various notable guests including former directors Joe Arminio and Sarah Stilles, as well as other members of the Program's illustrious alumni. Dr. Arminio, the Program's first director now currently serves as a defense consultant.

Dr. Stiles, the program's longest tenured direc-in the Sociology Department at Georgetown University.

"It was neat to hear from a group of people that took part in the program at various times and at various levels," said Tom Hunt, a current sophomore in the Program who serves as the Events Committee Chair on the Steering Committee.

Freshman Evan Brown agreed with Hunt, saying, "the most interesting how far we have come."

То conclude event's program, to the Program's newest addi- celebrations to date. tions in Professors Jackie Norris and Patricia Bory.

fressor Marr also thanked the the incoming Class of 2015 two individuals that, along Sarah Durgin. "Now, where is with herself, made the evening the cake?" possible in Student Director Amanda Merkwae and Deputy part of the many addresses Student Director Erin Cady.

After the event's program came to a conclusion, the desserts, coffee, and conversa-Director tion continued to persist well Margaret Marr shared with the into the evening. The celebracrowd her final thoughts. She tion proved to be one of, if not introduced and offered thanks the most, well attended annual

> "Happy Birthday Leadership!," proclaimed newly In her address Pro-selected teaching assistant to leadershipvisions 11 SPA

Mitchell Duncombe Named New Student Director

tic-bag recycling proability issue group.

lobbying campus vendors to decrease disposcampus, the group tesbefore the DC Council 2011-2012. regarding a proposed bag tax, which passed unanimously and went into effect on January 1,

The SPA Leadership 2010.

Program is proud to announce that Mitchell Duncombe, a relished the success of the rising senior double major- project, his love for the Leading in CLEG and International ership Program developed Relations, will serve as Stu- from the bonds he formed dent Director for the up- with his tremendously talentcoming school He looks forward to cesses of the Program's 20th freshman project. He is an in-Anniversary year, and hopes to credibly positive and encourcontinue building and main- aging leader. He will surely taining great relationships bring the Program to new with the new freshmen class. heights in the coming year!" Duncombe plained, "If I have learned tor Amanda Merkwae. one thing from this Program, it's that leadership is rela- more year, Duncombe served tionships. By learning and as a teaching assistant for the laughing with the talented, first year Leadership students creative, and driven students in and provided guidance to the Leadership, you will develop as Education issue group as they a leader and acquire the tools to implemented a weekly child make a difference in the world." literacy program in con-

Corvallis, Oregon and avid Church in Northeast, DC. environmentalist, Duncombe

Although Mitchell year! ed classmates and mentors.

"I had a great time building on the fantastic suc- working with Mitchell on our ex- said outgoing Student Direc-

> During his sopho-A proud native of junction with Good Success

"Serving in the Studevoted his freshman year in dent Director position will the Leadership Program to allow me to give back to the implementing a plas- Program that has been such across the pond," Duncombe an integral part of my college gram at AU with the experience and personal de-Environmental Sustain- velopment," said Duncombe.

After spending the In addition to past two semesters abroad at Oxford University studying politics, philosophy, and able bag distribution on economics, he will be tasked with heading the twelve- pertified on live television son Steering Committee in

"As much as I en-5-cent plastic and paper joyed my year-long vacation explained. "I am ready to get back to what I love mostputting sharp noggins together and sculpting some beautiful public-service. As Student Director, I hope to enable the gift that keeps on giving—fiery, passionate SPA Leadership students who are bent on making this world a better place."

SPALeadership Announces...

The 2011-2012 Steering Committee

Alumni Coordinator: Zach Baldwin Deputy Director: Ki'tay Davidson Events Co-Coordinators: Peter Goelz & Liza Romanow Fundraising Coordinator: Rachel Koretsky Finance Coordinator: Joe Wisniewski Interclass Coordinator: Linnea Jordan Media Coordinator: Sylvia Brookoff Mentorship Co-Coordinators: Megan Huber & Catalina Lillo Publicity Coordinator: Jean Cornell

Class of 2015 Teaching Assistants

Sarah Durgin : Civil Rights and Diversity Cheria Funches : Education Holly Hagerty : Environmental Sustainability Dani Nispel : Gender and Sexuality Tyler Sadonis : Politics and Empowerment David Shirbroun : Poverty

Class of 2014 Teaching Assistants

Sara Aucker Rebecca Bucchieri Melissa Chang Anthony Miller Olivia Stitilis

12 leadershipvisions A Message from the Program Director Her exceptional diligence, dedica-Her exceptional diligence, dedica-Filen Miller, and Emily B

Publication Staff Publications Chairs Leslie Kodet Staff Writers John Caddock Jean Cornell Holly Hagerty Dan Raymer Tyler Sadonis Philip Scranage Emily Yu Cheria Funches Peter Goelz Cristina Kladis Malea Otranto David Shirbroun Ken Whitley

SPA Leadership

Program Director Margaret Marr Student Director Amanda Merkwae Deputy Director Erin Cady Steering Committee Events Committee Tommy Hunt Alumni Committee Lauren Hickev David Silberman Rachel White Website Manager Sylvia Brookoff Treasurer Phil Cardarella Buddy Coordinator Sarah Robinson Mentorship Chair Todd Carney

Her exceptional diligence, dedica- Our seniors Kathryn Baxter, tion, and listening skills serve as a Ellen Miller, and Emily Beyer model to all whom she leads. As joined Graduate Assistant Mara consequence, this year's Steering ni Bromberg, Adjunct Professor Committee has been more suc- Patricia Bory, and me in guiding cessful in all of its events, publi- the sophomores to the successcations, coaching programs, and ful completion of their indirelation efforts than ever before. vidual social action projects, life

As Teaching Assistants, sopho-skill acquisition, and cultural mores Kathryn Braisted, Stephen challenges. Meeting weekly in-Bronskill, Danna Hailfinger, Katie dividually with each sophomore,

An outstanding year - Hanson, Cristina Khan, and Tom these TAs have helped mentor made possible only by the Schad have given many hours to these students to expand their excellent students the first-year class of 2014. Their capacity to achieve. In so doing, many who lead this program: our service has ensured not only the the TAs learned management, Student Director, Steering success of each of the excellent motivation, and mentorship Committee members, and first-year social action projects, skills.

our teaching assistants. As but also created camaraderie I am grateful for these stuour program is student led within class which expanded this dents' service, as I am for the and executed, our students year from 35 to 42 students. Their many contributions of every have opportunities to learn ideas have added components to member of this great program.

leadership lessons that only the first-year curriculum, includ- I look forward to the coming This, ing Leadership Adventures in year with great optimism. Folexperience affords. in turn, contributes greatly DC, where each TA takes a small lowing Amanda, Mitchell Dunto the leadership education group of students to explore a part combe certainly has big shoes this Program offers. I could of the city while learning a leader- to fill as our new Student Direcnot be more pleased or more ship lesson. They also helped to tor. I am confident that, with his proud of the students who add a unit on power and privilege, warm heart and insightful nahave contributed to making which is sure to become a corner- ture, he will serve our Program stone of our program's curricu- well. He has already amassed an this year such a success. outstanding Steering Commit-Amanda Merkwae has been lum.

phenomenal as our Student These TAs have also been on the tee even as he traveled Europe Director. She is an archetype front line of support that this Pro- and Asia on spring break from of Lau Tzu's invisible, servant gram offers our members through Oxford. And the outgoing TAs She carefully times all our triumphs and tragedies in have selected an excellent class leader. Fundraising Committee the gentle nudge that moti- the transition from high school to of incoming TAs. We are all set vates people to do their best. college that is the first year. for a terrific 2011-12!

•	More fast facts about the senior class 4909 community service hours served	More notable awards
	89 internships held	For their dedicated commitment to 7 Honors students	their careers in the or	3 Presidential Scholars	environment, Stephen Bronskill
,	3 Dean's Scholars	'13 and Jen Jones '12 won the Udall
~	12 will graduate with Latin Honors	Scholarship!
	1 Truman Scholar	I -
	2 Presidents of the College Republicans	Carol Foster and Nate Brostein of
	29 have worked on campaigns	the Class of 2012 are Harry S.
	6 completed the Campaign Management Institute	The second Discol
	2 completed the Public Affairs and Advocav Institute	Truman Finalists!