Dr. Christos Kyrou is a Project Manager and Practitioner at the International Institute for Sustained Dialogue (IISD), and a Member of the Resource Board for the Center for International Relations. He is the founder of the Environmental Peacemaking Program at the Center for International Development and Conflict Management at the University of Maryland (CIDCM).

His peacebuilding practice IISD includes the project “Talking One Generation Ahead” (TOGA), a sustained dialogue project in Northern Ireland involving young leaders of five political parties, as well as other dialogues.

He has led and participated in several peace-initiatives both abroad and in the US and has received the "Peacemaking Award for Commitment to Building Peace at the Individual, Local or Global Level" by the Program of International Peace and Conflict Resolution, The Peacebuilding and Development Institute, and the Center for Building International, at American University in 2005.

He is originally from Thessaloniki, Greece and became an American citizen in 2000.