25 percent of assistance is withheld until the U.S. Secretary of State certifies and reports to Congress that each government is taking effective steps to:

• Inform its citizens of the dangers of the journey to the southwest border of the United States;
• Combat human smuggling and trafficking;
• Improve border security;
• Facilitate the safe return, repatriation, and reintegration of undocumented migrants.

50 percent of assistance may only be obligated after the U.S. Secretary of State certifies that the governments are taking steps to:

• Combat corruption and strengthen public institutions;
• Improve civilian jurisdiction and counter activities of criminal organizations;
• Protect human rights;
• Support programs to promote equitable growth;
• Implement effective civil society consultations;
• Increase government revenues.
