<td>Direct: Students in their action learning paper, students identify a minimum of four courses with at least four references to books, articles, or scholarly readings for each course that they applied while conducting their capstone action-learning project. The review focuses on the answers to the following questions in the paper: D) What was I blind to? What do I still need to learn? K) What behavioral evidence can I bring to support my claims? H) To what extent did I re-frame the presenting problem? Why? To what extent did I resolve my problem? What specific actions did I take? What else do I need to do to resolve the problem? And the following questions in their oral presentation to determine the depth of learning and understanding of the subject matter and how the knowledge is applied to the action-learning project: C) How did my values, assumptions, beliefs, and expectations influence the data I saw, the decisions I made, and the results I achieved? D) What was I blind to? What do I still need to learn?</td>
<td>Each student's capstone action-learning thirty-page paper consisting of the answers to eighteen questions and oral presentation consisting of the answers to fifteen questions is reviewed and graded on whether the learning outcome has been achieved.</td>
<td>A committee of the faculty and Key Executive Advisory Board will review student papers, student evaluations of courses and professors, and student exit evaluations every fourth year, beginning in year 1, and make recommendations to the Program Director and Chair of the Department of Public Administration on whether Measure 1 is being met. The Program faculty will meet to consider the recommendations.</td>
