

Women To Probe Bill Clinton

WASHINGTON—A group of women Democrats is planning to launch a campaign to probe the Clinton administration's handling of the Iraq war, a move that could lead to a formal investigation of the president's conduct.

The group, known as the Women's Caucus for a New Direction, is led by Sen. Hillary Clinton, the former first lady. She has announced that she will introduce legislation to create a commission to investigate the administration's actions in Iraq.

The commission would be tasked with examining the administration's decision-making process, including the role of key officials such as Vice President Dick Cheney and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. It would also look into the administration's handling of the war's aftermath, including the reconstruction of Iraq and the treatment of prisoners of war.

The Women's Caucus for a New Direction is a bipartisan group of women Democrats who have been vocal critics of the Clinton administration's policies. They include Sen. Hillary Clinton, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, and Sen. Barbara Boxer.

The group's efforts are part of a broader movement to hold the Clinton administration accountable for its actions in Iraq. This movement has gained momentum in the wake of the 2004 election, when the administration's handling of the war was widely criticized.

Demts. Seek New Iraq Plan

Democratic lawmakers, including Rep. Nancy Pelosi and Sen. Hillary Clinton, are seated at a table during a meeting.

WASHINGTON—A group of Democratic lawmakers is pushing for a new plan to deal with Iraq, a move that could lead to a formal investigation of the administration's conduct.

The group, known as the Women's Caucus for a New Direction, is led by Sen. Hillary Clinton, the former first lady. She has announced that she will introduce legislation to create a commission to investigate the administration's actions in Iraq.

The commission would be tasked with examining the administration's decision-making process, including the role of key officials such as Vice President Dick Cheney and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. It would also look into the administration's handling of the war's aftermath, including the reconstruction of Iraq and the treatment of prisoners of war.

The Women's Caucus for a New Direction is a bipartisan group of women Democrats who have been vocal critics of the Clinton administration's policies. They include Sen. Hillary Clinton, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, and Sen. Barbara Boxer.

Republicans Search for New Deal

WASHINGTON—A group of Republican lawmakers is searching for a new deal to deal with Iraq, a move that could lead to a formal investigation of the administration's conduct.

The group, known as the Women's Caucus for a New Direction, is led by Sen. Hillary Clinton, the former first lady. She has announced that she will introduce legislation to create a commission to investigate the administration's actions in Iraq.

The commission would be tasked with examining the administration's decision-making process, including the role of key officials such as Vice President Dick Cheney and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. It would also look into the administration's handling of the war's aftermath, including the reconstruction of Iraq and the treatment of prisoners of war.

The Women's Caucus for a New Direction is a bipartisan group of women Democrats who have been vocal critics of the Clinton administration's policies. They include Sen. Hillary Clinton, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, and Sen. Barbara Boxer.

Victims of Craig's Fall

WASHINGTON—A group of lawmakers is searching for a new deal to deal with Iraq, a move that could lead to a formal investigation of the administration's conduct.

The group, known as the Women's Caucus for a New Direction, is led by Sen. Hillary Clinton, the former first lady. She has announced that she will introduce legislation to create a commission to investigate the administration's actions in Iraq.

The commission would be tasked with examining the administration's decision-making process, including the role of key officials such as Vice President Dick Cheney and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. It would also look into the administration's handling of the war's aftermath, including the reconstruction of Iraq and the treatment of prisoners of war.

The Women's Caucus for a New Direction is a bipartisan group of women Democrats who have been vocal critics of the Clinton administration's policies. They include Sen. Hillary Clinton, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, and Sen. Barbara Boxer.

WASHINGTON—A group of lawmakers is searching for a new deal to deal with Iraq, a move that could lead to a formal investigation of the administration's conduct.

The group, known as the Women's Caucus for a New Direction, is led by Sen. Hillary Clinton, the former first lady. She has announced that she will introduce legislation to create a commission to investigate the administration's actions in Iraq.

The commission would be tasked with examining the administration's decision-making process, including the role of key officials such as Vice President Dick Cheney and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. It would also look into the administration's handling of the war's aftermath, including the reconstruction of Iraq and the treatment of prisoners of war.

The Women's Caucus for a New Direction is a bipartisan group of women Democrats who have been vocal critics of the Clinton administration's policies. They include Sen. Hillary Clinton, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, and Sen. Barbara Boxer.

WASHINGTON—A group of lawmakers is searching for a new deal to deal with Iraq, a move that could lead to a formal investigation of the administration's conduct.

The group, known as the Women's Caucus for a New Direction, is led by Sen. Hillary Clinton, the former first lady. She has announced that she will introduce legislation to create a commission to investigate the administration's actions in Iraq.

The commission would be tasked with examining the administration's decision-making process, including the role of key officials such as Vice President Dick Cheney and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. It would also look into the administration's handling of the war's aftermath, including the reconstruction of Iraq and the treatment of prisoners of war.

The Women's Caucus for a New Direction is a bipartisan group of women Democrats who have been vocal critics of the Clinton administration's policies. They include Sen. Hillary Clinton, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, and Sen. Barbara Boxer.