

Research Seminar Series

Kerwin 301

1/18 | 12:00 PM

Nolan Pope

*Assistant Professor
University of Maryland*

THE UNINTENDED IMPACT OF PRETRIAL DETENTION ON CASE OUTCOMES

Evidence from NYC Arraignments

In the United States, more than 400,000 individuals are detained in jail daily while waiting for their criminal cases to be resolved. Are those individuals who are detained pretrial because they were randomly assigned to a stricter judge more likely to be convicted and serve longer prison sentences? Join University of Maryland Assistant Professor Nolan Pope to discuss the effects of pretrial detention.